

DevelopmentAid and the International Association of Port Development Announce Strategic Partnership

DevelopmentAid and the International Association of Port Development (IAPORTS) are pleased to announce the launch of a strategic partnership aimed at empowering port authorities, maritime stakeholders, and associated businesses worldwide to better access international development and public procurement opportunities.

Through this collaboration, IAPORTS members will gain privileged access to the DevelopmentAid platform: <https://www.developmentaid.org>

DevelopmentAid is a leading information and networking platform for organizations and professionals active in the international development sector. It provides comprehensive access to tenders, grants, project intelligence, expert databases, and partnership opportunities from major development banks, donors, and institutions worldwide.

In addition, IAPORTS members will benefit from exclusive discounted access to TenderWell: <https://tenderwell.com>

A powerful global procurement intelligence tool that enables organizations to track government tenders and procurement notices across nearly 200 countries, supporting more informed and timely business decisions.

Empowering IAPORTS Members

This partnership is designed to strengthen the global competitiveness of IAPORTS members by enabling them to:

- Identify and pursue relevant international tenders, grants, and investment opportunities
- Access high-quality market intelligence and procurement insights
- Build strategic partnerships and participate in international project consortia
- Expand their footprint in global development and infrastructure projects, particularly in the port and maritime sectors

By combining IAPORTS's specialized network in port development with DevelopmentAid's global development intelligence and TenderWell's procurement tracking capabilities, this partnership creates a powerful ecosystem for collaboration, innovation, and growth.

Together, the partners aim to unlock new opportunities for port-related organizations to actively contribute to and benefit from international development initiatives worldwide.
