THE SITUATION

Vickie and Justin had been married 7 years. They bought a home in Fort Worth together and by the time things fell apart, both names were still on the mortgage. Justin had moved out, Vickie was still in the house but couldn't afford the payments alone.

They couldn't agree on repairs, listing price, or timeline. Every week of delay meant another mortgage payment neither of them wanted to keep making. Attorney fees were piling up and the equity they'd built together was slowly getting eaten alive.
