

SPONSORSHIP

Put your name on the best two hours of someone's week.

Sixteen guests. Sixteen people who would never spend this on themselves, having the best five minutes of their day — and your name is the reason.

The problem with sponsorship

You've sponsored the same three: the banner, the program ad, the tote bag. Your name was seen by everyone and remembered by no one. A Healthy Hour™ is a fully hosted two-hour restorative wellness experience. Five-minute chair sessions, seated and fully clothed. No appointments, no sign-up sheet. Nobody presents. Nobody pitches. And nobody forgets it.

Every guest chooses one

01

ARRIVE™

Hand reflexology.

02

RESET™

Spine and lower body.

03

RECONNECT™

Head, neck, and shoulders.

ARRIVE™ means no one has to opt out. A guest can be fully cared for without being touched anywhere but the hands — so the person who is guarded, sore, self-conscious, or simply not sure still gets to sit down and receive something. Nobody is left watching.

Sponsors are recognized, not selling.

No pitch, no presentation, no sign-in sheet. You are the reason sixteen people had a good afternoon. That is the whole message — and it's why communities say yes to this when they turn away vendor tables.

What sponsorship does

- Your name on the promotion, signage, and welcome table. It is on everything the room sees, from the invitation to the moment they sit down.
- Sixty seconds to welcome the room, if you want it. A greeting, not a pitch.
- Two hours in the gathering area, where people talk. Guests arrive early and stay late. Introductions happen without anyone engineering them.
- A written recap within 48 hours. Date, venue, and guests served — the record of what your sponsorship actually did.

This is not a chair in a hallway. It is a hosted experience — a therapist, an operations host, full staging, beverage service, every detail handled. Sponsorship is how that reaches someone who would never spend it on themselves. There is no list of who qualifies. Care that fits should fit anyone.
