About Taekwondo

What is Taekwondo?

Taekwondo is a martial art developed in Korea, with roots starting more than 2000 years ago. The word "taekwondo" can be translated as the "art of the foot and hand" or the "art of kicking and punching". Taekwondo is different from other martial arts in that, while it uses hands, it emphasizes the use of foot and leg techniques.

There are various focus areas within taekwondo as well. Taekwondo includes defensive techniques (the foundation of all styles), demonstrative forms, Olympic-style sparring (one-on-one), and demonstrations (board-breaking, "cool" kicks, weapons, and choreographed forms).

Benefits of Taekwondo

Our classes provide an opportunity to improve yourself physically, mentally, and philosophically.

Physically: Become more flexible, improve endurance, speed, and strength, have more energy, and learn to defend yourself.

Mentally: Build your inner strength and become a more powerful and confident individual by setting and achieving personal goals as well as learning to lead by example.

Philosophically: Learn to live by the Five Tenets of Taekwondo.

Five Tenets of Taekwondo

Courtesy: Respect for others and self

Integrity: Dependability; Good judgment; Doing the right thing

Perseverance: Strive to reach your goals; Commitment

Self-Control: Strength to do what is right, despite the conditions around you

Indomitable Spirit: Unconquerable courage; Never give up!

Taekwondo Class Rules

1. Bow to the national flags when entering and exiting the dojang, or area of training.
2. Bow with instructor belts upon meeting as well as before and after instruction.
3. Address instructors as Master/Instructor ___Name___. Questions asked by instructors or senior belts should be answered with enthusiasm and completed with "Sir" or "Ma'am".
4. Remove jewelry, shoes, and socks for class (Taekwondo shoes are an exception).
5. Dobak (uniform) pants, top (or school T-shirt), and belt are always required. Any clothing worn under the uniform should be white (or black for black belts) leaving no graphic designs visible.
6. No food, drinks, or gum are permitted on the training floor. Refreshments are allowed during permitted water breaks.
7. Conversation is to be kept to a minimum during class.
8. Profanity, loss of temper, horseplay, loud disturbances, or displays of a lack of self-discipline will not be tolerated.
9. Unless given specific instructions, students are to always remain standing during class. When sitting, students are to sit with their backs straight and fists on their knees.
10. Students should arrive at class on time. Those who come late should line up immediately. If stretching and warm-ups have already finished, students should do 20 jumping jacks and a very brief individual stretching session before joining.
11. Students should practice only those forms that have been taught to them by the instructor. They should not try to skip ahead just by observing higher belts.

12. Do not complain about strenuous exercises. Improvement is earned through hard work.
13. Taekwondo techniques are not to be used on others without proper supervision or outside the dojang unless circumstances involving your safety or the safety of others are overriding.
14. Every student is subject to the school's rules and regulations. Non-compliance will result in the following penalties:
 - Warnings, reduction of test scores or denial of permission to test, or temporary suspension of membership in class
15. An excessive number of warnings or suspensions will result in permanent termination of school membership without refund of membership fees.

Taekwondo Class Outline

Classes are split according to belt ranking. White through purple belts should attend beginner class. Blue belts and up should attend the advanced class. (Times included above in the Calendar).

1. Enter the dojang with a bow, check uniform, and remove shoes. Prepare to have fun!
2. Once it is time for class to commence, line up with the highest rank to the right. Rank goes by belt color, stripes, and then age. When the front line becomes full, form a second line behind it. Late students should line up in the back or the end of the last line.
3. Class begins with the pledge, followed by a quick warmup and stretching where the lead instructor will count in English, followed by the class responding in Korean.
4. Class will continue with an exercise meant to challenge footwork, endurance, strength, speed, agility, quickness, and/or other fundamental elements of taekwondo.
5. Next, students will split off according to rank to learn technical movements. This is where students will learn movements to defend themselves in real life situations as well as earn stripes for testing (this will be covered more in-depth under testing).
6. Afterwards, class will involve paddle kicking, sparring, or other more challenging exercises.
7. Class will be finished with all students returning to their original positions from where class began.
8. Class will end with the pledge.
9. Gather belongings and bow before exiting.

Students may train in the back of the room when it is not time for their own class. They can stretch, review form techniques, practice drills as taught in class, work on kicks and such. Students training in the back will be expected to always remain focused and respectful. Students who repeatedly cause disruption to class or the other students training, will no longer be permitted to train outside of their specific class time.

Pledge

Senior students will recite the pledge, pausing at the end of each line for the rest of the class to repeat after them. The pledge goes as follows:

*I Pledge:
To respect myself and others,
To promote peace,
To stand strong,
And to never give up.*

The pledge is finished by the senior belt in Korean by bowing to the flags, followed by bowing with the master instructor, other instructors, and the senior belt. See Korean terminology to see pronunciation.

Taekwondo Promotion Testing

For a student to be allowed to test for a promotion, they must earn three black stripes and one red stripe. Each black stripe (earned separately) indicates the ability to perform assigned form, self-defense moves, and sparring moves, respectively. The red stripe indicates the student has demonstrated all the above (after all 3 black stripes have been earned). This indicates that the student is eligible (but not required) to take a test at the next test.

Group testing will take place on the last Tuesday of every other month, starting at 6:15pm. To maximize efficiency, filled out testing forms should be turned in early in the week before testing with the student's philosophy portion of the test. If there is ever a timing conflict, please speak with your instructor to discuss other options.

Even if you are not testing, all ranks are encouraged to attend testing events. Upper ranks are expected to attend. These events are great opportunities to learn and practice.

Independent Taekwondo Association Membership

Currently, students are required to join USATaekwondo at blue belt. However, in Spring 2026, we plan to transition to the Independent Taekwondo Association (ITA). Membership in that organization will be required in the future and will be a requirement for testing when that change occurs, as promotion certificates will come from that organization. More to come on this as the transition begins to occur.

Korean Terminology for Taekwondo Class

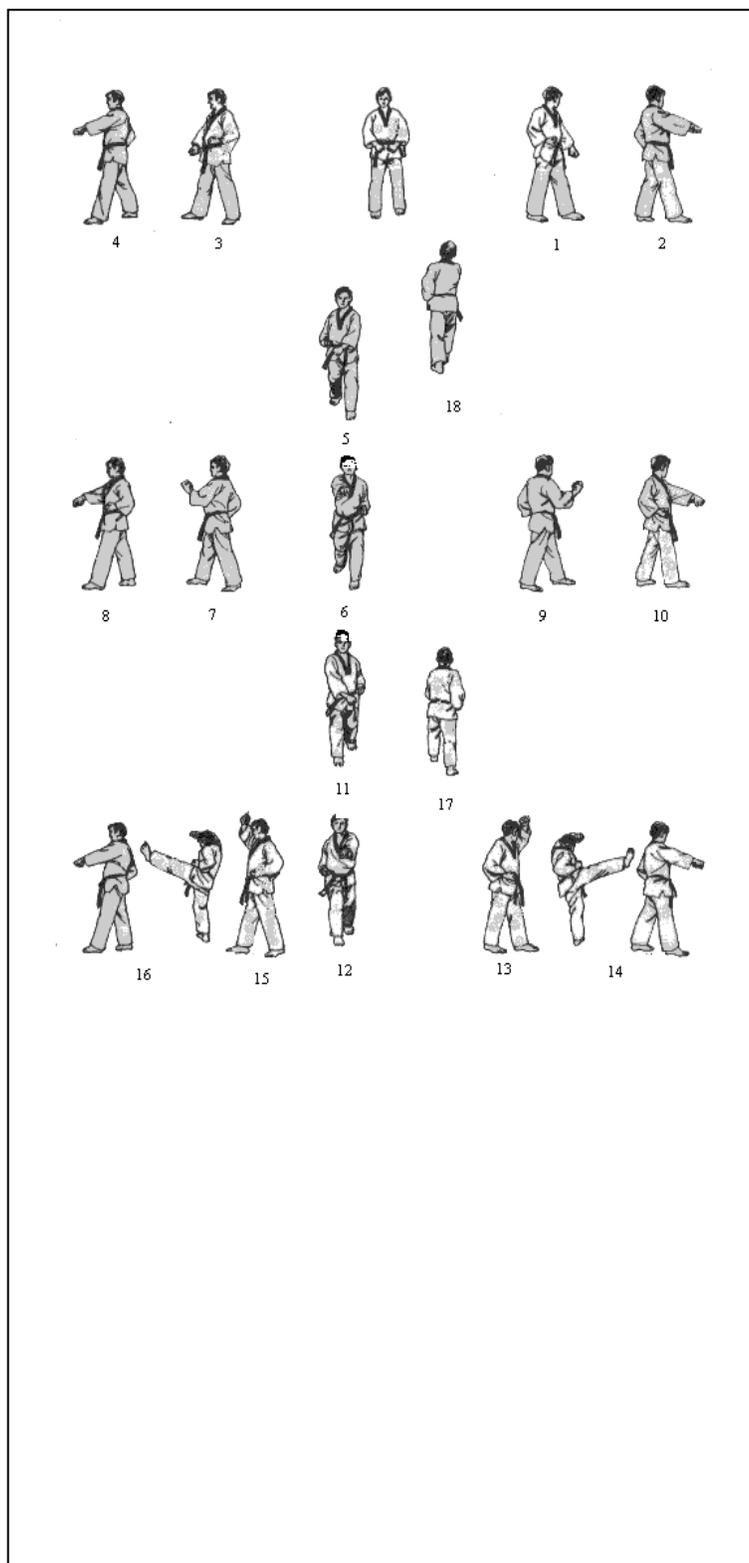

The following words and phrases will be used in class. They are provided for your convenience and reference only. These terms should be learned gradually with time spent in class.

Taekwondo: To translate this: “do” means the way of, or the art of; “tae” means the foot; “kwon” means the hand. So, literally, it translates to “The art of the hand and foot” or “The art of kicking and punching”.

About Combat Hapkido

What is Combat Hapkido?

Combat Hapkido - also known by the slogan “The Science of Self Defense” - is a martial art focused on practical self-defense system for teens and adults. It includes a wide range of techniques, including break-away moves, strikes, joint locks, pressure points, ground survival, and weapons disarming. The result is a comprehensive self-defense system that is practical, enjoyable to learn, and effective in realistic situations. Combat Hapkido is an eclectic form of Hapkido that was founded in 1990 by Grandmaster John Pellegrini. He then formed the International Combat Hapkido Federation (ICHF) in 1992. This art was official recognized by the Korea Kido Association and the World Kido Federation in 1999 as “Chon Tu Kwan Hapkido”.

Benefits of Combat Hapkido

While Combat Hapkido is considered a martial art and as taught as such, it focuses primarily on self-defense. For example, there are no “forms” or competitions. It is specifically intended to provide you with “tools” for your self-defense “toolbox”.

Membership in ICHF

Boyd’s Defensive Arts, LLC is a Charter Member of the International Combat Hapkido Federation and teaches Combat Hapkido under that Charter.

Because we teach Combat Hapkido under a Charter, every participant in Combat Hapkido class is required – at least at the time they test for Yellow Belt – to become a member of the ICHF. There are options to become a member on a yearly basis, 3-year basis, or a lifetime member.

Promotion Testing in Combat Hapkido

Currently, there is not a set schedule for testing in Combat Hapkido. At this moment in time, testing is done on an individual basis, when the Combat Hapkido instructor informs you that you are prepared and ready to test for a promotion. If the class size grows to the point that this method becomes impractical, then a testing schedule will be established.

Seminars

There are many Combat Hapkido Seminar available throughout the year. You do not have to be in a martial art to attend one of these seminars; however, if you are in a martial art, you are strongly encouraged to attend one of these events.

Sr. Master Boyd is also a Certified Combat Hapkido Seminar leader, so please consider attending any local seminars that are scheduled.
