COLLECTIONS. THE FIRST STEP IN THE EDITING
WORKFLOW I USED TO EDIT 300+ WEDDINGS IN 2025

HELLO & WELCOME

I've spent the last 4 years working as a high-volume wedding photo editor, and last year alone, I edited 305 weddings and elopements while maintaining a 3–5 business day turnaround without sacrificing my evenings and weekends.

Not because I rush through galleries.

But because I don't approach a wedding as one massive project.

I break it down. It's the moment you import a wedding and see 3,000+ photos staring back at you that makes it feel like a mountain you have to climb.

And most photographers dread it so much that they delay getting started.

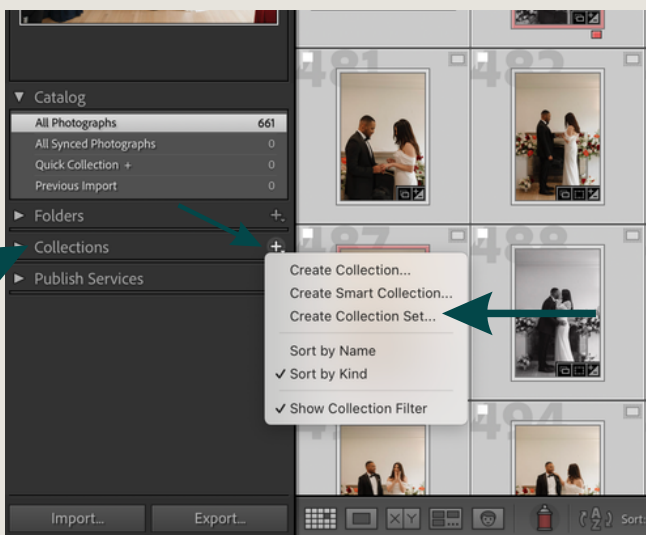

When you stop looking at a wedding as “3,000 photos” and start seeing it as a series of small, manageable sections, editing instantly feels lighter.

A simple shift using Collections inside Lightroom that helps you organize a wedding day into sections — so you can move through your edits with more clarity and a lot less overwhelm. And once you experience that difference, you start to realize that editing faster isn't about working harder; it's about working within a system that supports you.

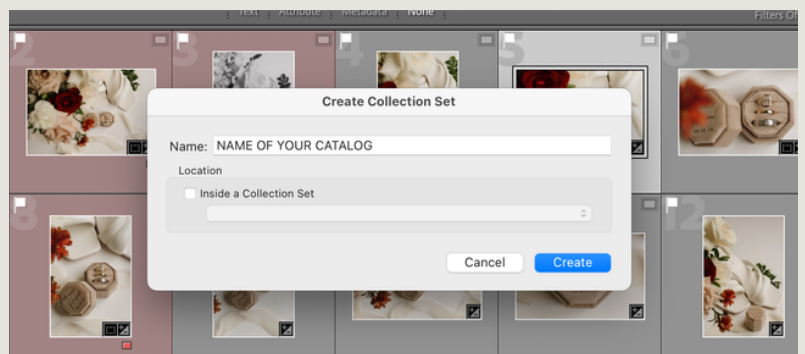

CREATE COLLECTIONS

When you start at 3,000 images and cull down to 900 to edit, that number can still be intimidating. Sorting the day into sections breaks it up so you can focus on a smaller number at a time.

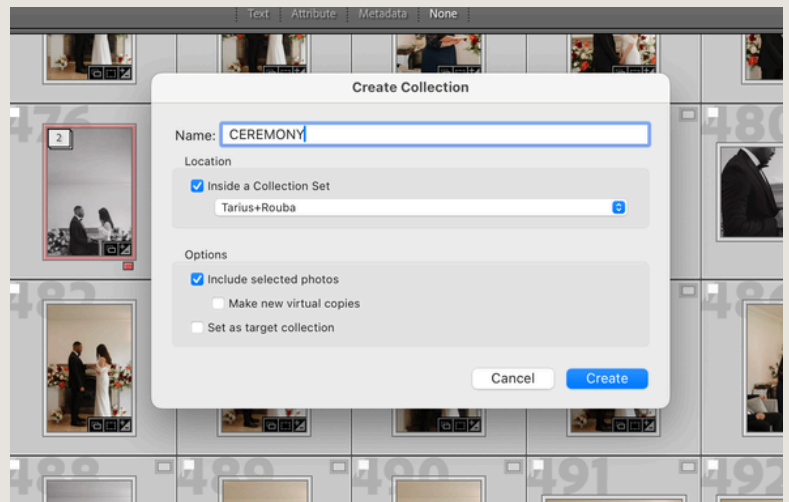

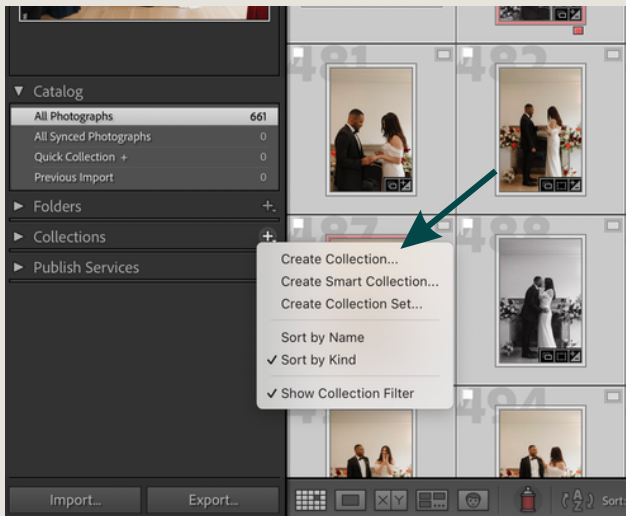

MAKE SURE YOU'RE IN THE LIBRARY MODULE AND LOCATE YOUR COLLECTIONS TAB. CLICK THE + AND SELECT CREATE COLLECTION SET.

Name the Collection Set the same as your catalog or the name of the wedding. Then Create.

PULL IMAGES INTO YOUR COLLECTIONS

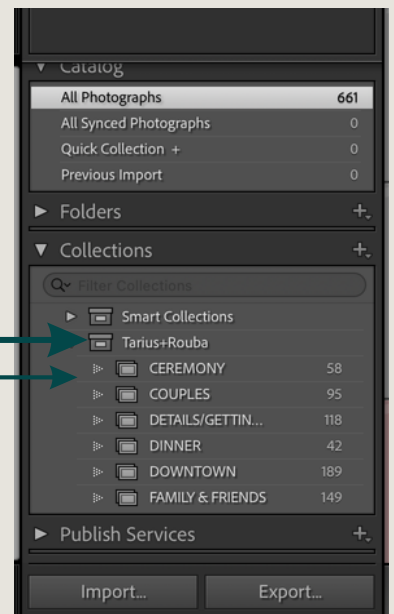

Work from the beginning to end so you don't miss anything. Think of the sections of the day: Getting ready, details, ceremony, reception, etc. Select a section of images>create collection>name the collection>Inside the collection set you just made>include selected photos>Create.

Your collections are now neatly inside your Collection Set.

If you need to add images to a Collection after it's been made, just drag them into the Collection.

*Be sure to click and drag from the center of the image.

OH YEAH! NOW THAT YOU HAVE COLLECTIONS, YOU CAN REARRANGE THE IMAGES INSIDE. 🎉

JUST GETTING STARTED
