Questions for Personal Reflection and Group Discussion

1. Read Titus 2:1-10.
In Titus 2:1, Paul links two important things together. What are they?

Why does it matter that how we live – our words, attitudes, and actions – aligns with the things we claim to believe? What happens when there is a gap between what we say and what we do?

In verses 2-10, Paul gives practical instructions for how different people in different circumstances should live out their faith. Write down the various instructions or character qualities you find listed in these verses.

How does living out our faith make the gospel attractive to others?

2. Read Titus 2:11-14.
In these verses, Paul outlines what God has done for us and how we should respond. What has God done on our behalf? How are we to respond and what hope do we have for the future?

How do you put Paul's instructions about how we are to live in this world into practice? What does living with wisdom, righteousness and devotion to God look like in your daily life? How might you do that more consistently?

3. Read Titus 3:1-1-2.
How are we as followers of Jesus called to engage in our culture? Toward whom are we to be gentle and show humility? In what aspects of civic life might this be a challenge for you?

4. Read Titus 3:3-8.
How does Paul describe what we were like before being redeemed by Jesus? (vs3)

What does Titus 3:4-7 tell you about what God has done for you and why He did it? What kind of response does Paul call Christ-followers to in verse 8?

5. Read Titus 3:9-11.
Why do you think Paul gives the reminders he does in these verses? In what way do these verses challenge you?

Do your words, attitudes and actions make Jesus attractive to others?
