Tour Highlights

Departing Adelaide, we fly north over the Flinders Ranges to the tiny outback town of Marree for morning tea. Hundreds of years of history are displayed throughout the building and surrounding area looking back on a bygone era.

Departing Marree, Lake Eyre South becomes visible as we fly towards the Marree Man, a modern geoglyph discovered in 1998, measuring 4.2km in height. From the Marree Man, Lake Eyre comes into full view as it grown on the horizon. Measuring 144km x 77km, it is incredible to see the expansive landscape from the vantage point we have from our aircraft.

Our late afternoon departure from William Creek takes us over both Lake Eyre North and South again, with different lighting conditions it can seem as though it is a different lake. As the sun sets, we will have you back in Adelaide with a camera full of photos and a heart full of memories.
